Overview

Antonia Jameson is a barrister specialising in personal injury, clinical negligence and inquests. Her practice encompasses advocacy and advisory work, for both claimants and defendants.

She is experienced in all stages of litigation, from pre-action advice and drafting, to trial. She undertakes personal injury work in a wide variety of areas including occupiers' liability, employers' liability and public liability disputes. She has represented parties in claims for fatal accidents, industrial disease, chronic pain and permanent physical injury.

She returned to chambers in October 2021, having spent 12 years away from the Bar as a full-time mother.

She has always represented a wide variety of clients, appearing in an array of judicial forums, including the High Court and the Court of Appeal.

Antonia has always had a robust, tenacious yet adaptable advocacy style.

She will practice from 3PB's Bournemouth office, but her caseload will – and did – cover the whole of the UK.

Antonia lives in Dorset, close to the sea, with her husband and three young children. Her passions are the sea, walking, skiing, family and friends.
